

September 17, 2008

To Whom It May Concern:

My husband Greg and I first learned of Riverchase Construction, LLC. In the summer of 2005 when the lot across the street from us was sold and construction began. In the evenings we often ventured over to the lot to see “how things were progressing” and couldn’t help but be impressed by the quality of the building materials, the workmanship as well as the cleanliness of the worksite itself. Mr. Thomas, a.k.a. “Dain”, was often seen on the job quite frequently, which to me is extremely important and noteworthy. It was obvious that the general contractor overseeing the construction of this home was very particular.

In January 2006, when we made the decision to find a larger home, we immediately thought of Dain and asked him to come over and discuss the matter further. We liked everything we heard and the way in which he represented himself. Our decision was made and within a few short weeks a contract with Riverchase Construction, LLC. was signed.

The building process was an extremely enjoyable experience for us and we love our new home immensely. Dain was (and still is) wonderful to work with. He was and always is honest and upfront about all phases of the building process. He was more than willing to explore different options, material choices, various vendors and “extras.”

Greg and I would welcome the opportunity at any time to speak more specifically about our building experience with Riverchase Construction.

Sincerely,

Gregory and Barbara Roberts

